WITHOUT PREJUDICE

Hi Mr Langdell,

(redacted)

We only want your written permission to sell our game in the US to take no risk, in exchange we will give you the permission and our protection to use our trademark EDGE in Europe. You may know EA made an opposition to the Future' trademark there, so in a way you are lucky we registered the trademark before them. If you agree we will make a press release to explain we have a deal, so your partners will understand what happened. We want to make video games, not lawsuit, what about you?

You can remove the lines about the 5% fee, it is just a security in case one of us used the trademark for a good or service without permission, but i understand this line implies money what is not good in a amicable deal.

(redacted)

Best regards,

David Papazian
